THIS IS WAR

This Week - 11/04/2009

This year has gone by rather quickly, but its not over yet. There is still a lot going on with Thirty Seconds to Mars. It's November and that means there is barely a month remaining before This Is War hits store shelves on December 8th.

The title track from the upcoming album is exclusively featured in the new EA Games Dragon Age: Origins. Click on the image below to watch the trailer featuring This Is War now.

TRASH AND VAUDEVILLE
4 ST MARK'S PLACE

Trash and Vaudeville was making and selling those skinny black jeans that are everywhere now long before they were popular. The great news is that at this place, they're 60 bucks. It's a local New York institution, but I'm surprised this place has held on as long as it has. The owner stuck it out, and he's still here, kicking ass.

SAN LOCO
111 STANTON STREET

San Loco is New York's only real taco place. I was living here off and on for quite some time, a long, long time ago, in 1991. [My brother] Shannon lived here in 1993, in Alphabet City. I used to come here at all hours. It's one of my favorite places: easy, cheap and good. It can stand up to the Mexican food in L.A.

Café GITANE
242 MOTT STREET

It's just that kind of place, you know, the kind where everyone goes, the kind where you run into your friends, like we just did. [Lito bumped into photographer Terry Richardson, pictured below, and musician Moby sitting outside.] It's a neighborhood place that has been here for a while and still feels like a neighborhood place. That's not always the case in New York. I think places that last a long time are here for a reason.

BALTHAZAR
80 SPRING STREET

Balthazar feels like an authentic French restaurant. It's not like Café Gitane, when you feel like you're in New York. It more or less takes you there. Their food is so consistent and solid. I've been coming here for years. I go in the off hours—it's open all the time, and it's even more beautiful when it empties out, especially during the day, when fewer people are here.

Café HABANA
17 PRINCE STREET

I've been trying to get Shannon to go here for so long. I've been telling him forever that they need to open one in L.A. Now they're opening two in L.A. Habana has a special charm to it. You're crammed in there with a ton of other people—models, locals and tourists. It's crowded, but there's just a good energy, you know? I often go to the takeout counter next door when it's too crowded. I've got to get some plantains.

Weekly Picks From the Band

Book of the Week

The Road Less Traveled by M. Scott Peck, M.D. Psychotherapy is all things to all people in this mega-selling pop-psychology watershed. His agenda in this tome, which was first published in 1978 but didn't become a bestseller until 1983, is to reconcile the psychoanalytic tradition with the conflicting cultural currents roiling the 70s.

Movie of the Week

The Mission starring Robert De Niro, Jeremy Irons, written by Rober Bolt, and directed by Roland Joffé follows the struggle of 18th century Spanish Jesuits as they try to protect a remote South American Indian tribe in danger of falling under the rule of pro-slavery Portugal.

Album of the Week

Air - Moon Safari

"'Moon Safari' is like the soundtrack to a film you've never seen. Inventive and unique. French music... Très bien." - Jared

Website of the Week

<http://www.mashable.com>

Founded in July 2005, Mashable is the world's largest blog focused exclusively on Web 2.0 and Social Media news. With more than 12.5 million monthly pageviews, Mashable is the most prolific blog reviewing new Web sites and services, publishing breaking news on what's new on the web and offering social media resources and guides.
